COUNCIL MEETING

Councillors Hold First Meeting for the Year—All Present—Busy Session

T. FRAYER ELECTED CHAIRMAN

W. A. Beebe Is Secretary-Treasurer—Councillor Lyon Introduces Incorporation

The first meeting of the newly elected Blairmore councillors took place in W. A. Beebe's office on Friday evening last.

The meeting opened at 8 p.m. Councillors T. Frayer, L. Dutil and H. E. Lyon were present. The first stroke of business was the appointment of a chairman when councillor Lyon moved and councillor Dutil seconded that councillor Frayer be appointed chairman. This was carried and councillor Frayer then took the chair. The appointment of a secretary-treasurer was then called for, when W. A. Beebe was re-elected to that office, which position he is to fill until the end of the present council or until we are incorporated.

Councillor Dutil moved and councillor Lyon seconded that the secretary-treasurer be instructed to write the secretary of Blairmore Lodge, No. 68, I. O. O. F., to ascertain if they would rent their hall to the Blairmore council for one night a week.

The night on which to hold the regular monthly meeting was then discussed. It was moved by councillor Lyon and seconded by councillor Dutil that the regular night of meeting be on the second Monday in each month and said meetings to commence at 8 p.m.—carried.

The committees were appointed with the following result: Councillor Lyon is a committee of one to look after chimneys and fires; councillor Dutil is sanitary inspector, and chairman Frayer is inspector of roads and bridges.

Councillor Dutil moved that the secretary-treasurer write Messrs. F. McLaren, Mitz, Scott and West Canadian Collieries to know if they would sell to the village a piece of land three acres or more for village purposes. Councillor Lyon seconded this and it was carried.

Councillor Lyon said that as he was a new councillor and therefore not having seen copy of contract, plans and correspondence in connection with the water works, he would ask the chairman to place same on the table so that he would be able to become fairly acquainted with the matter. This was done.

It was moved by councillor Lyon and seconded by councillor Dutil that the council advertise in the BLAIRMORE ENTERPRISE for prices on land suitable on which to erect a fire hall. Prices, size and where located to be presented at the next regular night of meeting.—Carried.

A bill for $77.50, was received from Dr. D. C. McKenzie for hospital expenses on George Laidlaw, and was ordered paid.

The next matter of business was in reference to incorporation. Incorporation is evi-

Miner Killed at Burmis

Burmis was the scene of a fatal accident on Friday last when Edwin Smith, aged 26 years, met his death at 3:30 p.m. by a falling rock. Smith was working in the Davenport Coal Company's mine there when a large fall of rock suddenly crushed him to death. He was a single man and was engaged by that company about seven months ago. He was buried on Wednesday. A coroner's inquest will be held on Friday.

Engineer Killed

George Koshy, of Calgary, engineer on the C. P. R., was killed in a railway accident near Granum on Monday morning last. Engineer Koshy was running an engine from Macleod to Calgary when it was derailed between Macleod and Granum and he was crushed under it as it turned over. The deceased had been in the employ of the C. P. R. for twenty-four years. He was well known throughout this district and had many friends in this town.

C. P. R. Trains Delayed

High winds which have drifted the snow into huge banks delayed trains on this line on Sunday and Monday. The line was practically clear West of here, and along The Pass ideal weather, with a very moderate wind, prevailed. But the distressing tale comes from Macleod where the gale filled the cuts and held up all the trains for thirty hours. There was no west-bound train here on Monday and they were four hours behind in reaching this place on Tuesday.

Tales of woe also come from Saskatchewan and Manitoba where trains were snow bound and railroad traffic paralyzed for many hours. Several snow plows which went out to negotiate with the snow drifts on the prairies became derailed and passengers were threatened with being snowed under.

It is a popular subject for when it was mentioned, the large number of spectators, which crowded the council chamber, put on a look of appreciation and hoped that this matter which the BLAIRMORE ENTERPRISE had been long agitating for, would be soon realized. It was moved by councillor Lyon, by whom this subject was introduced, and seconded by councillor Dutil, that the secretary be instructed to post up notices immediately informing the public of a meeting to be held in the Mercantile hall on Monday, February 13, 1911, when it is hoped that the matter of incorporation will be thoroughly discussed.

At the close, chairman Frayer asked if anyone in the audience had anything to say or had any questions to ask about last year's work or about work now under contemplation. Everyone seemed to be satisfied as there was no reply and all beamed with a smile of approval.

INCORPORATE BLAIRMORE

Is the Sincere Request of a Large Number of Its Ratepayers.

INCORPORATION IS LIVE TOPIC

The Advantages of Same Are Many—Should Have Been Done Long Ago

Incorporation is becoming a live topic around Blairmore and if present indications are to be considered the majority in favor of it will be very large when voting day comes.

This is a matter which the ENTERPRISE has been advocating during the past three or four months and it is indeed gratifying to us to know that it is being looked upon very favorably by the ratepayers of this place and no right thinking citizen seems to be opposed now to erecting Blairmore into a town municipality.

Many questions have been asked us on the street regarding how to go about incorporating and what advantage it would be to Blairmore to have same.

We might state for those who may not know that it is necessary for a special meeting of the ratepayers to be called to have the census of the village taken and if there be found to be over 400 persons living within its limits steps may be taken towards its incorporation as a town.

The resolution applying for incorporation should state exactly the proposed limits and area to be included in the town. After this resolution has been approved of by the meeting, notices, stating the intention of the over-seer to apply to the Lieutenant Governor to have the village erected into a town municipality and giving the lands which are to be included within its limits, will have to be published.

The expenses connected with this work need not exceed fifty dollars which would allow for hall rent for public meetings and publishing of notices in local paper and the Alberta Gazette.

The advantages to be derived from incorporation are many. Our borrowing powers will be such as to allow us to secure money with which to make many much-needed civic improvements. The money taken in at the police court (while it may not be large) will be sufficient to pay the salary of our policeman who would besides being chief of police be able to act as secretary-treasurer, sanitary inspector, assessor, the same as they are doing at Coleman. At present the money taken at the police court goes to the provincial government.

A public meeting will soon be held to decide this matter when it is hoped that all who desire to see this place move out of its old rut and make big progressive strides, will attend.

P. Buras says that on account of the hard winter in the West, the price of beef will make a material advance in the near future. Pork and mutton will also move up the scale.

Additional Blairmore

W. H. Chappell and wife, of Bellevue, are visiting this week end in Blairmore.

The hockey match which was to have taken place here last night, had to be referred to Frank owing to the storm. Blairmore picked up a bunch of "scrubs" from the street to fill places in the team. The game resulted in a score of 5-1 in favor of Coleman.

The dance given by the Blair-
more hockey club in the Mercan-

Hockey

Hockey fans were afforded a splendid exhibition at Coleman on Saturday night, which was one of the hottest games of the season.
The game started about 9:30 p.m.
with about two hundred spectators present, a large number of whom were hooters for the Blairmore
team from Blairmore and Frank.

Blairmore's line-up were: C.
Dellas, goal; Spence Lewis, point;
Dan Lewis, cover point; Harold Hennessey, left wing; George Ingham, right wing; W. Goddard, centre; D. Boyle, rover.

Coleman's line-up were: H.
Helm, Goal; Bert White, point;
Alex. Gressak, cover point; S.
Hastfield, right wing; Alex. Easton,
left wing; C. Graham, centre; E.
Gordon, rover.

From the start Blairmore seemed to have everything in their favor and some excellent maneuvering took place during the first time of twenty minutes. A well directed shot from Coleman was repulsed by Dellas, after which Hennessey carried the puck and jared it behind the Coleman
"bars." First time Coleman 0, Blairmore 1. In the second heat he boys appeared as fresh as ever and referee McNeil was kept busy at his post. Through a foul with Blairmore's right wing Gordon was fenced for one minute. Blair-more scored first with a well directed shot from Boyle, Easton
was here fenced for one minute.
Coleman followed with two successive goals, and time was finished with score of Coleman 3, Blair-more 3. In the third heat Blairmore's rover and right wing became disabled, the latter receiving a stroke in the spine from the puck of an opponent. This, with the fencing of D. Lewis for one minute weakened Blairmore's forces considerably and gave Coleman
a chance to show their laurels, and the final third resulted in Coleman's favor with an additional three.

The Blairmore boys put up an excellent game and the work of the Lewis and Harry Hennessey was really admirable. The Blair-more team lacks somewhat for want of practice, and if they could but spare a short time now and again at practice, they would have little difficulty in waving the victorious puck against most of their competitors.

The gate receipts were large, and as tickets galore were on hand
very few got in on "card no."

The hall, on Friday night, was well attended and was a grand financial success. It was four a.m. on Saturday before the weary party broke up and wended their way home.

Several members of the Central Baptist Church called on their pastor, Rev. J. F. Hunter, on Friday evening last and presented him with a Morris chair. Late in the evening a good supper was served. All present enjoyed themselves.

There was one Coleman man
at the hockey match, played there on Saturday night last, who was too officious and his antics were such as to almost cause some to refuse him to the proper authorities to test his sanity. To use an everyday Coleman street parlance,
he is a "card."

THE JOURNEY.

Any's Experience in an Upper berth and What Followed.

By CECILY ALLEN.

"I am very sorry it cannot be arranged," said the young man, with a deprecating wave of his hand, "but—"

"All the latest popular novels!"

"Chance to get your reading matter!"

No books sold on train after it started! The newsboy bawled this in Amy Currier's ear, and she just all the young man said except the words "can't climb those heavily steep!"

Not that she cared. She was quite able to climb the little ladder to the upper berth. Her lip curled scornfully.

"Oh, it doesn't matter in the least, you know," it was the conductor's idea, I assure you. Only in the south, where I come from, men, as a rule, are more obliging."

She picked up her novel and proceeded to ignore McKean's presence. He looked at her blankly, then flung himself down the stairs to the smoking compartment. "Well, I do think she's a bit harsh!" He pulled out a paper and tried to forget the scene in the eyes but recently lifted to meet his.

In the meantime the girl in section 7 stared wrathfully at the letters in her book, which fairly danced before her eyes. "A nice beginning for my trip! I never wanted to go to Colorado Springs anyhow. I had much better remain at home!"

She turned to look at the Carters' invitation into coming west."

With this final reflection she commenced to read in earnest, but somehow her mind went back to the very disagreeable young man who had disregarded the sleeping car regulations, and that he yield the lower berth to the young woman, whose Pullman ticket had been duplicated by a careless employee in an unknown office. She could not forget the real reason in his eyes nor the nervous, embarrassed way in which he had smoothed his hair while he was offering his explanation. She could not reconcile this, however, with the fact that he had declined to climb the little stairs in her stead. It was most annoying, she argued, that she could not forget a certain fascination which his long, firm hand had laid over her hair and the hair he had smoothed.

She could imagine that he had spent hours trying to brush out a certain tendency to crisp curls. She was very glad there was something that could defeat him, if it was nothing more than curls, and after deciding this she was more content.

She did not see him again until she entered the diner at dusk. The only place left for her was a single seat at a table meant for four. The three passengers already seated were men, talking business in rather loud tones. Amy hesitated. A figure at the end of the table rose suddenly. The very disagreeable young man who had sentenced her to the upper berth was standing beside her.

"Take my place," he said eagerly, "and I will go over there with the men." He had picked up a small, dark-haired woman was sitting opposite him.

He saw all this at a glance and with a surprised uprising of her eyebrows and a mechanical "Thank you" accepted the seat. The young man had not yet been seen, and she was glad that the change had not embarrassed him in the least.

Quite willing to do things that she did not deem him, she thought accurately.

The young man did not presume upon the reception of this courtesy. Directly after dinner he once more returned to the smoking compartment, and Amy early ordered the porter to make up her berth. Once more she angrily aware she forgot her grievances. The clunk-clunk of the wheels was a singular lullaby to which she soon yielded.

It seemed as if she had not been asleep more than three minutes when she awoke to the most horrible noises that she had ever heard. What had happened? Had the train run into a circus or a jungle of wild beasts? No, the train was still moving, its unrelenting clunk-clunk could be heard at intervals between the awful sounds which no wassal her ears. If it were not wild beasts, then maybe some one around her was snoring.

This pretty, carefully reared, ever-protected southern girl had never seen any one else, and in her ignorance of the most various and most natural ways of working herself up into a fine frenzy. A particularly deep and agonized roar followed by a sound that was a cross between a peen and a sob. She could stand the suspense no longer. She pushed the tiny button down, carefully arranging the curtains, and stuck out her head to meet the look of inquiry in the porter's black face. Up and down the car she gave a hasty glance. Apparently no one was alarmed by the tragedy that was going on so close at hand, for no other curtains were drawn, no other heads were thrust out.

"Banda you want, miss?"

"Why—why, don't you hear that dreadful noise?" she said, "I think some one in the berth next to me is snoring."

In the dim light she could see the dark, toothy, snoring man in a grin that reached from ear to ear.

"It's just the gentleman in the lower berth, miss, snoring. I will wake him up."

Any jerked in her berth as the porter had struck her. She could feel his teeth and the sound of his snoring. Two masculine voices were wafted toward her, then the sound of a deep snore that was decidedly masculine—and sleep.

Up in her berth Amy lay, still snoring softly with her mouth open. She knew that porter had come up to her on the train next morning. She wished she could change cars. Then suddenly from the berth below the hated sound came again. Evidently there was no respite from this affliction, and oddly enough, she felt herself pitying the man who was responsible for it. It was really a disease, she decided, and he was no young fool!

The next morning she met him face to face in the dining car. Her cheeks were flushed with crimson. She knew by the quizzical light in his eyes that he had heard of her mistake, and unaccountably she felt that she had done by this time and would consider it a fine joke.

She ate her breakfast in a resentful mood. She felt restless and miserable, and it may have been this mood which caused her to say uncertainly as she crossed from the diner back to the sleeper. Her cheeks came up to steady herself against the side of the vestibule. Suddenly it seemed to her as if a sharp, cold hand had been thrust into her finger tip and run up to her shoulder. She tried to draw away her hand as a child does from a hot stove, but something held it tight, and then she awoke to the truth. The hand had been swinging around a curve, and from iron pillars, or folds, of the vestibule, left uncovered by a careless employee, had opened just far enough to admit her finger and then had closed again. She was held in a vise, and her calls for assistance could not be heard above the roar of the train. And so it happened that the "dainty young man" came upon her, white-lipped and fainting. When they pulled the hand loose he carried her down the stairs, and the porter came drawing her. The conductor came hurrying up, greatly perturbed over the accident, which meant a damage suit for the company. He turned to the porter.

"Hurry along the train and find out whether there is a physician on board."

The young man spoke sharply. "I am a physician, Porter, bring me that dog's narrow black bag from my berth."

And so it happened when Amy woke up it was to find the hateful young man, white-lipped and fainting, in her hand. The drawing room was placed at her disposal by the anxious conductor, and the entire train force was in its knees before her. The unfortunate vestibule meant that some employee's head would fall into the baggage car.

Toward noon, in spite of the terrible pain in her crushed finger, Amy commenced to feel drowsy, thanks to the mild naps which Dr. McKean had administered. He plumped up the pillows for her, and she murmured drowsily, "I didn't sleep very well last night."

McKean bit his lip. "I was afraid you wouldn't. That was the worst part of my trip, to sleep in the berth with you, but I couldn't get him another lower in the car, and he stubbornly refused to buy up a drawing room."

Amy felt suddenly wide awake. "My Carver! Why didn't you?"

"I don't know. You didn't think I was raising the roof of my berth, did you? Mr. Carver has been at a sanitarium just east of Hartburg. He is a pale, thin, nervous man. He is a doctor, and he asked me to pick him up and bring him on to Colorado Springs, where I am visiting for a week or so. That's what was trying to tell you last night."

A sudden light dawned on Amy. "Oh, it's all the fault of that newsboy! I am going to the Carver myself. They're giving a home party."

"Yes, I know," said McKean, "I saw your card in your baggage. But now you're going to sleep in the berth and you see you are not rocked off when we make a fast run."

Amy dropped back weakly among the pillows. "No, I don't mind. I will be only too glad to have you stay." Suddenly she raised her heavy eyelids. "But promise me you will never tell what I said to the porter last night."

Dr. McKean's eyes twinkled. "I promise on my honor."

Where He Stood.

A statement which was defended for office said a good many things. "It was cocksure," he says, "before the primary that I would just trim my opponent and good and sure. I don't hesitate to say so, either. I was liked good and proper, and what happened to me is best expressed in this story."

He told of a certain citizen coming out of his hole and getting on a good vantage point, where he frequently reiterated this bombastic declaration: "I can hit you like a forest! I can kill any bird in this forest!" A big hawk was watching the chipmunk, and just when the latter was a little more homesick than ever, the hawk made "a swoop and a swipe at him."

There was a squall for a second, and the hawk came up with several snorts, then shot into his hole. Some time later he emerged, warily peeping around. "No, I didn't kill him," he said. "No, I didn't kill him," he said. "No, I didn't kill him," he said.

DELFT EMBROIDERY.

Smart Effects For Use in Summer Cottages.

Delft embroidery is new and is most attractive in the cool distances of the sea for the summer room. It is usually all worked in dull blue of several shades, a sort of coarse, butchery's blue, and is usually white that it can scarcely be called cream.

All of these bags are faced with the lightest of the three shades of blue and are lined with a coarse, butchery's blue, and is usually white that it can scarcely be called cream.

It must be remembered that the choice of color is as important a factor as the design.

In this work as in the design if the finished product is to resemble delft ware.

Varying but slightly in idea and general effect, the two bags show such different little Dutch ideas, one of them knitting, the other merely a face of a woman knitting. She is characterized of stitches, including outline, solid, skeleton, cat and laid work.

These are used to their best advantage in the carrying out of each part of the design, as are also the several shades of blue.

Dutch figures similar to these are carried out in a whole line of articles, including larger bags for the family, including laundry bags, bed-room bags, and such articles.

A prominent feature throughout the whole lot of this delft blue fancy work is the standing or seated figure of a woman knitting. She is characterized of stitches, including outline, solid, skeleton, cat and laid work.

All of these figures are treated by that method known to the decorative artist, a method that outlines its most Impressive parts with single delft blue. In this case it is accomplished by outlining.

One of the bags is intended for darning, one for knitting, and the other may be applied to all sizes of work bags or to many pieces of linen for use in the bedrooms of summer cottages.

The Guest Towel.

One of the prettiest designs in bed-room towels seen for a long time is called the guest room towel. It is of soft damask, woven in a dainty scattered design of sweet peas, a deep border, the flowers appearing at the ends, which are hemstitched.

The size is 20 by 38 inches and the price 35 cents.

Another pretty towel is a blue and white Turkish towel, with a red jacquard border that will not run in the washing, but will come from its rubbing looking like new. It costs only 25 cents and measures 20 by 44 inches, a reasonable price.

The crossbar dimities and the self checked towels are responsible for some of the daintiest looking pillow shams designed especially for summer use.

A rather large checked lawn, decorated with water lilies above a scalloped border, is thirty-two inches square and costs 35 cents. The scarf, 18 by 24, is the same price.

A second design is a grouping of daisies and hawthorn set on above a pretty scroll pattern edge hemstitched. The material crossbar dimity. This thirty-two inches square and costs 50 cents. The scarf is the same price.

Another pretty towel is a pillowcase of the dotted water hemstitched to a wide border of sheer crossbar. Price 55 cents.

For the Tea Drinker.

Those women who are fastidious in regard to their tea will be interested in a new import that seems to have reached perfection. It is simple too. Inside the pot there is a tea ball, its chain passing through the handle, the cover of the pot. This ball is filled with tea and is drawn up into a hollow in the cover.

Freshly boiled water is poured into the pot, and the steam arising from it mingles the tea. After a few minutes the ball is lowered into the water, then raised when sufficient strength has been extracted—all this without lifting the lid of the pot.

THE TURKISH BATH.

A Victim's Story of the Real Thing In Its Native Land.

WELL MAILED AND SCRAPED.

He Was Kneaded, Plucked, Turned Over and Walked Upon. And Then Scrubbed as Though He Were a Kitchen Floor.

The tourist who wanders about Shambani will from time to time come on domed buildings of all sizes which might be taken for mosques but that they seem to have no fountain and no minaret. From some place, such as the terrace of the mosque of Sultan

Bulayman, where their roofs may be criticized, it will be seen that the low domes are often of a peculiar salm on pink color and always covered with glass bulleeyes. These are the real Turkish baths.

Quite apart from the ceremonial

wash before prayer, which consid ers cleanliness not so much next to godliness as a part of godliness it order, a periodical scrub all over.

And the Turk, unlike the soddier, w

never sits in hot water, but prefers hot room, a tap and a basin as a m

anium and a shampooer and a d glove if he can find one, and be fore going to a private room or, if the bath is to be done on the cheap,

a place on the big common soap

heels slippers. Watch and val

may be left under the care of the cooking stove, who supervises

the process of undressing, and m

a loin cloth around one and throws

a primrose towel over one's shoulders.

Before crossing the floor of the cool ing room the slippers are again ex changed for wooden clogs, wherein the scowls walk like Agag, delicately,

an elegant check of red and yel low that may be seen any day in the streets on an apron worn by the Albanian sellers of chestnuts or sweet meats.

If that cigarette is finished com ing into the inner room, heavy with heat, the real bath begins. The sh oulders of the shoulder towel and the door, a heavy wooden apron, kept shut by a counterweight, whose bang

is not the least characteristic no

in the bath. Inside is a large square domed room. Innumerable bulleeyes in the domed roof reflect, making light and airy effect. On the great square slab in the middle they have placed a pile of pillows and here

one lies, leaving the clogs on the floor.

Round the room, screened from one another by dwarf walls, are a row of marble benches, and here may be seen all classes—such is the democracy of Islam—from the army officer to the key porter, whose shaved head oddly suggests a tomtom. The poorer classes
